Bennett House,

SALEM, OREGON.

L. JAY S. TURNEY,

HAVING LEASED THE ABOVE NAMED HOTEL, is prepared to accommodate the traveling public, and one HUNDRED REGULAR BOARDERS, in as good style as any House on the Coast. He has determined to make the "Bennett" as good as the best and better than any public house in Salem. He will soon complete some important improvements, which will add greatly to its appearance and comfort, and intends to merit and hopes to receive his share of patronage.

He has secured the services of "Charley" (known to be the best cook in Salem, and one of the best in the whole country) and other competent persons to manage the culinary department, and is resolved to set as good a table as can be found anywhere—not in clap-trap, pomp and show, flummery and fine furniture, but in an abundant supply of the very best the market affords.

His bar-room will be kept warmed and lighted, and well supplied with newspapers, periodicals, &c., specifically suitable reading matter, and kept in a manner which will make it an agreeable resort.

In short, he intends making an effort to please all who stop at the BENNETT House. And he will add well and favorably to his friends every one that favors him, and promises if they are not pleased with what they can do as well as any other house, properly cared for, and at reasonable rates, it will not be the fault of the public's most humble servant.

Wells, Fargo & Co's

FAST FREIGHT LINE!

GREAT REDUCTION ON FREIGHT

TO IDAHO!

In this city, October 26, 1866, of consumption, SAMUEL H. CURTZ, Esq., aged 42 years.

Mr. Culver came into the Territory of Wisconsin in 1842, the population of Janesville at that time being less than 100, and very few settlers in the vicinity. With energy, industry and patience he overcame the difficulties and privations usual and incident to the life of early settlers in the far west. He heard in the dim distance the footsteps of the millions who were coming like the waves of the sea, and he saw daily the changes that were turning the wilderness into a garden. He did his part in the development of the country with a courage that feared no danger, and with a hope that could not be destroyed.

In 1849 he was one of the thousands that followed the sun in his flight towards the eldorado on the Pacific. He was appointed Indian Agent for the southern district of Oregon in 1853, about the close of the Rogue River Indian war. A most bitter and implacable spirit of enmity existed at that time, and had for a long time previously, between the miners and settlers and Indians of southern Oregon, making the attainment and preservation of peace, as many believed, almost hopeless. Mr. Culver engaged in the effort to allay the passions and prejudices of the settlers and control the Indians, with an energy and determination characteristic of him in all his undertakings in life. To the prudent counsels and measures of his administration of the Indian affairs at that perilous time are justly attributed, in a great measure, the early settlement of that prosperous portion of the present State of Oregon. The early settlers of Jackson county will long remember his untiring efforts in behalf of their settlement. And while enjoying the almost unlimited confidence of his own race, an incident connected with his final departure from the country to return to this, his former home, will illustrate a prominent trait of Mr. Culver's character—his strict impartiality and the confidence acquired from all with whom he came in contact. As he was about leaving the Indian country the prominent chief of the tribe besought him to remain, having no confidence in the preservation of peace if he should go away; and this uncultivated savage, with others, actually rode with Mr. Culver a day and a half before they could be induced to leave him and consent that he should depart their country for the great "Boston Illahee," and it was only after the most marked exhibitions of savage grief and fear for the future, that they could be persuaded to bid him good bye, in pronounce the words in the Indian dialect, "clahowyam sic"—farewell friend.

In 1855 Mr. Culver returned to this city, and when the war of 1861 broke upon the people, threatening to destroy the Union, he was active in raising men and means to support the government. During the long night of horror he never despaired, never faltered. He performed his duty as a citizen during that eventful period with honor and fidelity, and he lived to see the flag of his country waving in triumph o'er land and sea, and its enemies scattered, broken and destroyed.

He had no fear of death, yet he said he would like to live, there was so much to do in the great future of this country. But he has gone to the land of the hereafter, and with a large circle of friends we mourn his loss. He was a kind son, an affectionate husband and a good citizen.

Peace to his ashes.

Funeral from his late residence, on Main street, Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.—Janesville (Wis.) Gazette.

The subject of the above obituary was well and favorably known in Oregon. His untimely death will be mourned by many old friends and acquaintances in this country. The deceased was a brother-in-law of Hon. O. C. Pratt.

PROGRESS OF WORK ON THE SUEZ CANAL.—A letter from Alexandria of October 5th says:

The cutting of the Maritime Canal of Suez, in the section from Suez to Chalouf, which was the last commenced, is being carried on with great activity. This section is divided into three parts—one that of the Quarantine at Suez, the other in the Plain of Suez, at a distance of four miles, and that of Chalouf, ten miles distant. The number of cubic metres (the metre is about three feet three and a quarter inches) to be removed in these different points of the canal is 15,997,248. Since the commencement of the works 202,742 cubic metres have been extracted. There consequently remains to remove 15,794,704 metres cube. The number of laborers employed on the whole line is 2,200; of whom 1,500 are at Chelouf, 350 in the Plain of Suez, 350 at the Quarantine. The extraction is made at Chelouf by means of several inclined planes, with locomotives, which present the advantage of greatly assisting labor. Eighty miners and two hundred laborers are occupied in blowing up the rock, which in this place is in the line of the canal, and of which the volume is 24,393 cubic metres. At the present moment 13,856 metres have been removed, so that there remain 10,537. The average monthly work done in this rock being 2,100 cubic metres, five months will still be necessary before it is completely finished. The earthworks in this place are, so to speak, insignificant compared with the rock; they amount to 113,566 cubic metres, of which 87,791 have already been taken away. For some time past the recruiting of Arab laborers has been made with facility, and the engineers have succeeded in inducing them to use wheelbarrows instead of coffins, which are much more convenient. If no obstacle should arise to disturb the recruiting, the preparatory works may be finished before the period originally fixed. The works of the quarantine and those of the Plain de Suez consists in cutting two parallel trenches, which will give access to the first dredging machines. These trenches are 22 metres wide and nearly 90 centimetres deep, and are designated as trench of Asia and trench of Africa. At the quarantine these trenches are 4,100 metres in length, and the banks of the maritime canal are thus indicated for all this length, with a trench on each side to receive the dredging machines. In the Plain de Suez the trench of Africa is executed to a length of 2,400 metres, and that of Asia of 2,400. Certain modifications have recently been made in the line to be followed in the environs of Suez. A mass of rock of 300,000 metres cube, instead of being cut through, is to be turned, and this will constitute a saving of about 10,000,000f. (£400,000) in the original estimate.

A KENTUCKY VIEW OF THE PRESIDENT'S DUTY.—The Frankfort (Ky.) Commonwealth has the following sensible comments on the duty of the President at the present crisis:

A large mass of the people of the loyal States have spoken in favor of that Congress which the President has seen fit to denounce as a band of traitors, a body assuming to be a Congress, as hanging upon the verge of the Government. Their action has been duly canvassed, their policy of reconstruction discussed in the stump and by the press; the President's objections and denunciations—at every station, from Washington to Chicago, and back again to the White House—have been heard by the people, and they have decided, in five loyal States, in favor of Congress. The issue was plainly made, the lines fairly drawn. Do you support Congress, or the President? was the question; and the people have answered it in unmistakable terms. It seemed strange that the President—one man—should oppose his will to that of the representatives of the people; that the Executive should lay down the law to the law-making power of the nation which he was oath-bound to obey. The people have rebuked that strange, unconstitutional, illegal course; have declared that their representatives have done right, and indorsed them in all their acts.

Now will the President learn wisdom from the people's will? Will he accept the lesson given him at the polls? Will he prove his Democracy by bowing to the behests of the sovereign people? He told them plainly of his views; "my policy" was rung in their ears till there was no mistaking it; every fault that the searching eye of hatred could find in Congress was clearly exhibited, and all his power and patronage used to further his will; yet the people have repudiated his views, have declared against his policy, have indorsed the course and espoused the cause of Congress, and refused to be corrupted by his patronage, or to succumb to his will. They have, almost with one voice, declared their representatives to be the exponents of their sovereign will regarding the settlement of national affairs. As the President of the people, it becomes his duty to obey their decree.

Chief Justice Coats has denied in the New York papers the stories that have been circulated concerning his daughter and her husband.

Napoleon's Great Blunder—The Mexican Fizzle—What Might Have Been.

Last impressions, despite the maxim which asserts the contrary, are always the most enduring; it is sincerely to be hoped that the strenuous efforts of the Atlantic cable to rout the Emperor of France to death will come to grief. Louis Napoleon has blundered so often during the present year that if he was to die just at this time, posterity would be apt to remember two well the grotesque and ludicrous failures of his earlier years, and history, in its final summings up, might class him among the imperial charlatans and humbugs. With all his genius for politics, Napoleon III. has made many mistakes of late, and especially does the expedition to Mexico, like Beau Brummel's "rumpled cravats," threaten to become one of his most stupendous failures. The empire which he founded in that godless country is virtually at an end; the more portable valuables of poor Maximilian have been transported to Europe by the prudent Carlotta; in a very short time Maximilian and the French contingent will embark at Vera Cruz, and not a vestige of the empire will be left to remind posterity that a luckless member of the house of Hapsburg once reigned in Mexico. Ruin, rapine, anarchy, insurrection and revolution will speedily claim Mexico as their own; and the unhappy land will again become the prey to civil war and universal brigandage.

From the first the short-lived Mexican Empire which is now tottering to its fall, had to contend with serious difficulties. The truth is that Napoleon III. would never have ventured on the rash enterprise of founding a Mexican empire in the teeth of the Monroe doctrine and under the guns of the United States, if he had not disbelieved in the possibility of American unity and speculated largely on the disruption of the stars and stripes. Had he rendered material assistance to the Southern Confederacy he might have assured the permanency of the Mexican empire and secured the independence of the Southern Confederacy. But he timidly refused to recognize and aid the brave people of the South in their gallant struggle, and he has been compelled to lower his lance in the same year to both Bismarck and Seward.

The Mexican empire grew up and withered in the cold shade of French patronage, for a dynasty must be robust, indeed, which can long bear up against the protection of a foreign Government. It effectually killed the Austrian exotic. He might have outlived Juarez and the Republican agitation, and have got on without much money amongst honest people, on decent country roads, but the popular idea that Maximilian was a mere dummy of Napoleon killed him; and as he entered Mexico with the French troops so will he depart with them. But for these troops he would long since have been swept away in some irregular and objectless rising, and been gathered to the innumerable Mexican Governments that have been overtaken by obscurity and oblivion. The full time has come for another revolution of the wheel—for the Cabinet Ministers and the military to become rebels and bandits, and for the present bandits to have a pleasant turn at official life.

But had Napoleon III. when he sent Maximilian to Mexico, rendered the assistance to the southern Confederacy which France, in the darkest hours of the American revolution of 1776 rendered our forefathers, he might have founded the most splendid empire or republic of modern times.

When Maximilian was sent to Mexico the North was reeling beneath the terrible and well directed blows of the Southern Confederacy. Beaten and outgeneraled at all points, despair had seized upon the universal Yankee nation.

The genius of Lee and Jackson had crushed Pope, Burnside, Hooker and a host of other Yankee leaders. The splendid courage of the Southern troops had proved an overmatch for the vastly superior numbers of the enemy. Napoleon, regarding the Northern cause as utterly hopeless, seized the moment of our greatest prosperity to found his Mexican Empire. Had he at that time come to our assistance, what a change would he have made in the destinies of the people of the Western hemisphere!

We should have triumphed in our great contest for independence, and somewhere in the neighborhood of Bunker Hill have dictated lenient and humane terms to the conquered Puritans. We should have had Butler, Forney, and that class of apostates and renegades, swearing that they were "original secessionists," and clamoring for the hanging of Grant, Sherman, and Greeley, and nominating General Lee for the Presidency of the most gigantic republic of modern times. But Napoleon did not seize the splendid opportunity, and when the Confederacy collapsed, the "Mexican Empire willed, like a wood at the touch of a hoar frost."

PROFESSOR AGASSIZ'S LECTURE.—Professor Agassiz delivered the opening lecture of a course at the Lowell Institute, Boston, on Tuesday night, November 6th. He said that upon his arrival in Brazil, the unexpected interest taken by the Brazilian Government enabled him to cover a much larger field than he had anticipated. On the voyage out he had prepared his assistants, by daily lectures, for the systematic organization of their labors, and upon arriving at Rio, he was able to undertake a most extensive exploration of the river basins of Brazil. The chief point to which he directed the attention of the party was the geographical distribution of living organized beings, and especially of aquatic animals and fishes, since their range is necessarily confined by the element in which they live. The results obtained had not all been overhauled, but a general conclusion was already to be discerned—that each of the large water basins has its inhabitants, differing from those of the other basins.

In order to investigate this subject, the party was divided upon a plan which the Professor explained at some length, in a most interesting manner. He observed that it also became important to discover whether the head waters of the rivers rising near the coast range of Brazil have the same inhabitants, it being known that the Rhine, Rhone and Danube, all rising within a short distance of each other, have the same fish in their upper waters, although in their lower courses their inhabitants are entirely different. This exploration of the head waters near the coast range, including the descent of the cacantius, was intrusted to Mr. Thomas Ward, who made a daring and entirely successful journey, of seven months' duration, through an entirely uncivilized and difficult country. The lecture closed with a description of the physical geography of the Amazon.

No Longer to be Trusted

While Johnson a Philadelphia Convention was in progress he sent to his Secretaries and Managers Browning and Randall a dispatch full to overflowing of pathos piety and pretended patriotism He said "I thank you for your cheering and encouraging dispatch The finger of Providence is unerring and will guide you safely through The people must be trusted and the country will be restored My faith is unshaken as to ultimate success" At that time he was playing the role of the demagogue, and so, of course, had many professions to make of devotion to, and faith in the people Two or three days after the above dispatch was sent, a committee of serving men appointed for the purpose went down to Washington to read to their master the resolutions passed by the Convention in praise of him and his policy They reached the White House in the afternoon and found its inmate in a most gracious and happy mood He was fully prepared, as usual for making a speech, and on this occasion he fairly surpassed himself As he drew his remarks to a close, he again affected a strain of deep solemnity, and spoke with unusual fervency of his great love for "the people" and of his readiness to obey their mandates "I acknowledge no superior except my God the author of my existence, and the people of the United States For the one I try to obey all His commands as best I can, compatible with my poor humanity For the other, in a political and representative sense, the high behests of the people have always been respected and obeyed by me" This is a vein of speech that a Pharisee might have envied Passing over the hypocrisy of the first part of this declaration, let us see what he means by the professions he makes in the last part of it After the elections are over, after the people to whom he so often appealed have indicated their will, so far as he from "obeying their high behests" that he defiantly says in his annual message 'My convictions heretofore expressed have undergone no change but on the contrary their correctness has been confirmed by reflection and time" A few months ago the people were to be trusted, it has now been discovered that they are entirely untrustworthy Up to last August the politician could say "The high behests of the people have always been obeyed by me" But now he is of opinion that their behests are worthy to be obeyed no longer, and announces that notwithstanding they have spoken their will, he intends still to adhere to his original purpose in despite of their commands While he was working for success, and "like a scurvy politician seemed to see the things he did not," he could be lavish of his promises and prodigal of his professions of devotion and duty to "the people," but as soon as the case is decided against him he loses his "faith in the people" and prefers to rely solely on his own judgment Such cant about "the people" as that above quoted from his lips usually ends in openly defying the people's will.

The latest dodge of the rebels who perpetrated the New Orleans massacre is to censure Secretary Stanton for not restraining them! They say he was apprised that bloodshed was imminent, and took no pains to prevent it. They hold that they are not responsible for their conduct under the circumstances, because it was the Secretary's duty, knowing that they threatened violence, to restrain them The fault is his, because, though they notified him that unless hold in check by force, they would not be responsible for their conduct, he nevertheless neglected to take measures to repress their violence!

THE CALIFORNIA STYLE.—The Bulletin and Times, the two leading dailies of San Francisco, are accusing each other of lying, stealing, and all sorts of dishonest and dishonorable practices A great part of their space each day is devoted to the work of abusing and vilifying each other They are pitching into each other in the true California style.

The Constitution of Indiana, like that of Oregon, forbids negroes to enter or settle in the State The Supreme Court of Indiana has, however, lately declared that clause of the Constitution, as well as the other laws of the State which place negroes under legal disabilities, to be in contravention of the Constitution of the United States, and therefore void

The Fortieth Congress will undoubtedly assemble on the 4th of March The House has passed a resolution to that effect already The President and his rebel friends will be headed off on every side, and the humble individual utterly defeated in every attempt, will have nothing to do but to sit in silence chewing the cud of vexation.

It is a notable fact that in every contested case decided by the House of Representatives, the decision of the people at the elections has concurred with the votes of the majority of Congress.

Continuation of Yesterday's Report

On the 9th of November Mr Seward wrote to Bigelow declining instructions of Campbell and Sherman to be laid formally before the French Government Bigelow's letter informing the Government of the French programme, are dated Nov 23d On the same day Seward notified Campbell that we have learned with surprise, that the French Government has postponed its stipulated withdrawal of a detachment of troops from Mexico, in November next with the purpose to withdraw that force some time next spring The President does not think it necessary or advisable to modify your instructions We are not without confidence in anticipating a satisfactory resolution on the subject from France It thus appears that our Government for not giving heed to the hint of the French steamship owner, and not saying out the cable telegram sent to Bazaine, offering a written plan, that we might see it, has despatched two important officers on a wild errand. The London Globe says there is not only a perfect understanding between the Cabinets of Paris and Washington but formal communications between the two Governments have taken place, the basis of arrangements being that the United States may do what they like with Mexico, subject to these conditions 1st. That certain tracts of land in some part of Mexico shall be left open to French colonists 2d. That arrangements which France has made for payments to the Mexican bondholders shall not be disturbed It is also stated that this arrangement was concluded without the knowledge of Maximilian and when he was apprised of it he manifested the greatest indignation and resolved at once to abdicate and quit the country leaving the French to treat for the withdrawal of their troops, either with Juarez or his protectors the United States. On arriving at Vera Cruz Maximilian wrote a letter to Bazaine insulting, to him personally and the throne of conspiracy and treachery to Napoleon It is expected that when Maximilian arrives in Europe he will have recourse to various measures unpleasant to Napoleon including the publication of the latter's letters The Mexican Emperor thinks his (Napoleon's) faith is not only broken with him but that he has been treated with studied indignity.

The London Globe says there is not only a perfect understanding between the Cabinets of Paris and Washington but formal communications between the two Governments have taken place, the basis of arrangements being that the United States may do what they like with Mexico, subject to these conditions 1st. That certain tracts of land in some part of Mexico shall be left open to French colonists 2d. That arrangements which France has made for payments to the Mexican bondholders shall not be disturbed It is also stated that this arrangement was concluded without the knowledge of Maximilian and when he was apprised of it he manifested the greatest indignation and resolved at once to abdicate and quit the country leaving the French to treat for the withdrawal of their troops, either with Juarez or his protectors the United States. On arriving at Vera Cruz Maximilian wrote a letter to Bazaine insulting, to him personally and the throne of conspiracy and treachery to Napoleon It is expected that when Maximilian arrives in Europe he will have recourse to various measures unpleasant to Napoleon including the publication of the latter's letters The Mexican Emperor thinks his (Napoleon's) faith is not only broken with him but that he has been treated with studied indignity.

It is reported that the physicians of the Empress Carlotta fear the absolute loss of her reason as well as her life

The London Times complains that the loyal people in Ireland do not show themselves but seem to leave everything to the Government police and the army and navy

Queen Isabella of Spain was to leave for Lisbon Dec 1st, on a visit to the King of Portugal, returning December 8th

The Roman correspondent of the Paris Debats writes that without conciliatory ideas do prevail in the counsels at Rome the busy and implacable faction which claims to dictate laws to the church and to trace the conduct which its august head should follow has done no other thing than by its silence to get him to quit Assisi, to take refuge with the government which it regards as revolutionary The Pope declared on October 20th that he would leave Rome if necessary, that is if he was forced to The object therefore is to get up a popular movement against the government so as to influence popular sentiment for this purpose the elements of disorder have assembled in the city of Rome The original chiefs of the Mafia and of Sicily have collected and his connected in the convents where their fanatic allusions are excited by their haste

NEW ORLEANS Dec 11 —The steamship St Marys has arrived from the Rio Grande with Brownsville dates to the 7th Gen Sheridan returned from the Rio Grande in the St. Marys Canales instead of being arrested is to be put in command of the troops under Escobedo and is to leave for the interior Cortinas is to command in Matamoras Gen Escobedo and Gen Sheridan had an interview in Brownsville, and Escobedo afterwards received a visit from a staff officer of the latter

A Fenian Privateer

NEW YORK Dec 12 —A special Boston dispatch says that a Fenian privateer is stated to have successfully eluded the Federal authority and sailed from Newburyport several days ago for the Irish coast The vessel in question is alleged to be the schooner Estella of 700 tons burden a clipper is said to be armed with a number of rifled guns and to contain a picked crew of more than 200, who have been sworn in for service Her officers are all men of experience

The Sun an officer states that before leaving for Ireland they have issued letters of marque and reprisal to the Estella to capture, sink and destroy all English vessels out of neutral waters Capt Burke himself has it in contemplation of making the Atlantic tour to the Irish coast and declared that the incoming Cunard steamers were to be captured at all hazards, adding that end the Estella has sailed directly in the track of the expected vessels Others will follow as chance offers and his purpose is to detail a portion of officers and men on the Estella to the first available English vessel captured and thus improvise other privateers.

HALIFAX, Dec. 12 —The gunboat Malvern left here yesterday as is supposed in search of Fenian privateers Great activity exists here in naval and military circles

Religion of the Upper Missouri Indians

[From the Mont]

That the soul lives after death, and that it is then in a final state is the general belief But on pursuing the inquiry, we do not arrive at any certain idea of the soul s occupation there They always say They don t know This much however, some acknowledge that "when they die their spirit is taken to the south to a warm country," but this place does not appear to be either in the earth or in the heavens It is the scene of a state of happiness free from all trouble war or accidents Some are more comfortably situated than others particularly great warriors and those who have paid particular attention to their religious ceremonies and offered large sacrifices No punishment for sin is apprehended but all is peace plenty and harmony If more minutely questioned, they will describe a counterpart of Mohammedan paradise or a shadowy image of this life abstracting the evil Many other Indian tribes speak dismally of the future of the wicked—their abode is a place of desolation destitute of fruits and roots of animals of all kinds where perpetual winter reigns marshy and misty filled with dangerous reptiles of every description In the portion of the good, eternal summer an l sunshine reign and an abundance of the choicest animals of the chase, of fruits and of roots—a place of peace and of never-ending happiness There is no resurrection of the body in the creed of those Indians, though they are presumed to have bodies given them in the future state with the same features and limbs as in this life, but not subject to the same vicissitudes and accidents sickness and the like Among some there appears to be an idea of two souls, one of the body, which hovers forever near the burial place, and one of the mind, admitted to the southern paradise

As I have said above animals of all kinds are found there it does not appear that they are the souls of those who have died on this earth, neither is their state of happiness everlasting Reasoning powers and immortality are not ascribed to the brute creation Everything referring to a future state is rarely made in the subject of their conversation There is a great difference of opinion with them as to whether death is to be a final state of both soul and body, though the ghost of the body remains near the grave They, in reality, have but little sincere belief in the existence of a future state, or, at least, not much importance is attached to the idea through life At their death their greatest anxiety appears to be for their families left on earth, and not much what is to become of their own souls They admit the uncertainty of their fate, but appear not to fear anything on the score of future punishments Upon the whole there is nothing in this belief that affects much their general conduct, either through life or on their death bed From this fact we may reasonably conclude that the foregoing view of their religion is correct, as they do not feel guilty of offenses against the Great Spirit, but only claim reward for the devotion they have shown in the manner of their worship They have no idea of atonement, or of a Redeemer who has come on earth to redeem them and to instruct them in the way of salvation They are seated according to Scripture, "in the shadow of death" They must be taught a correct idea of the Great Spirit of origin, of right and wrong, their wild passions must be subdued, before Christian principles can be implanted in their hearts Faith is a gift of God The conversion of these poor heathens implies the entire regeneration of the adult Indians —nothing short of a miracle of grace The task is truly a great one, but with assistance from above, it may be overcome In all my experience among these Indian tribes, I have found them always respectful, assiduous and attentive to the instructions in the holy Word of God They on all occasions express an earnest willingness or anxiety to have their children instructed in the consoling truths of religion, and in no instance did I ever meet with a spirit of opposition on their part.

AMERICAN CLAIMANTS FOR AN ENGLISH ESTATE —The Charleston Courier quotes manuscript evidence to show that there are valid American claims to the great Leeds estate in England Briefly, the case is this The old and magnificent estate of Temple Newsom, originally a preceptory of the Knight's Templar, was confiscated to the crown in 1312, and in the reign of Henry the VIII was given to the Earl of Lennox, the former occupants, Lords Darcey and Maynell, to whom the estate had been granted by Edward III, having been beheaded for their parts in the "pilgrimage of Grace" The grandson of Lennox, James the I. of England, gave the estate to Esme Stuart, who sold it to Sir Arthur Ingram Sir Arthur, who was a cavalier, and by saved his head and estate by his connection with Lord Fairfax and the Earl of Manchester, at the restoration had his son created Viscount Irwin The title died in 1778, when the property, after passing through several hands, finally came to Hugo Charles Meynell, with the condition annexed that he should take the name of Ingram.

The romantic feature of the case is that the Ingram family at South Carolina are a branch of the English family, were recognized as such by Mr Meynell Ingram in 1860, and are now the next heirs to the estate, which has recently become vacant. A meeting is soon to be held to take the necessary measures There are other heirs in this country. The value of the property has been estimated at 100,000,000 Temple Newsom itself is one of the most magnificent houses in England.

AN INDIAN FREAK —On Saturday night last several Indians—probably a dozen—went to a cabin occupied by two Frenchmen about half a mile above the Greenback mill on Sinker Creek; the cabin being covered with dirt and logs and built too strongly to be broken into with impunity. They climbed on top and threw sticks of wood down the chimney, cursing the inmates in English, and daring them to come out declaring that they wanted to kill them, calling them cowards, &c The two men inside stationed themselves at the door with a pistol and butcher knife —the only weapons on the premises—expecting every moment an attack in that quarter, but none was made After parading around and on top of the house for about an hour they retired, promising to return in three or four nights with sufficient force to clean out the whole country In the morning it was found that they had carried away several articles of more or less value, including half of a whipsaw, which they had broken in two, leaving one-half behind, and taking the other with them.—Onyhee Avalanche.

THE LOSSES OF GEORGIA —The losses of Georgia during the war were enormous, far more than is generally realized at the North The statistics furnished in a recent report of the Comptroller General of that State enable us to form a tolerably correct conception of the damages sustained by Georgia. By the tax returns of 1860 the taxable property is estimated at $222,183,757, while in 1866 it was returned at $372 292,441, which reduced to currency, would be $1 003,426,664, making over $700,000,000 as the loss occasioned by the war in one State alone This estimate does not include the amount swallowed up in Confederate bonds and scrip, which the Comptroller believes would swell the total loss of property in the Empire State of the South above a $1,000,000 000. This seems incredible. The returns of population, as far as they have reached the office, indicate a decided loss in population 86,609 white population is reported, against 99,748 in 1860, showing a loss of 12,339, or nearly one-eighth. No such extraordinary example of voluntary encountered impoverishment and destruction of life can be furnished by history

A QUESTIONABLE ACT —The New York Tribune has the following paragraph

No act of Mr Johnson better deserves investigation than his recent course in regard to the Baltimore elections, and Congress will doubtless so determine when the facts are brought before it as we learn they will be Even the friends of the President heard with surprise that he had delegated his power as Commander-in Chief to an official having no share in the National Government, in giving Governor Swann full authority to call out the United States troops in case of an emergency Unconstitutionality could go no further than to place the army of the United States under the orders of the Governor of any State That is enough We do not need to consider the purpose, even if it were to carry an election, or decide by the force of arms a question that belonged to the courts

LARGE NEGATIVE QUANTITY —The St Louis Democrat of November 13th contains this item, showing the influence which Doolittle and Randall exercised in the recent election in Wisconsin

Senator Doolittle the Republican announces, is in this city We should judge he would find almost any place pleasanter than Washington about these days Doolittle and Randall (Bread and Butter Randall) are both from the First Congressional District, which the Republicans barely carried two years ago with their help by a majority of 538 Now, with the utmost efforts of Doolittle and Randall and the whole pack of office holders to defeat the Republican candidate, he is elected by something over five thousand Which shows that Doolittle and Randall jointly have helped the Republican party four or five thousand votes—by leaving it Evidently Doolittle is a large negative quantity Properly written his name is Minus Doolittle

A pill box factory in Bristol Vermont uses up 300 cords of birch wood per annum —Exchange

And the pills create a demand for as many more cords for coffins

FROM THE KOOTENAI MINES —Mr Galbreath an extensive operator in the Kootenai country is just down for the winter and furnishes us many interesting facts in relation to the mines The report that the country has been given up to the Chinamen is altogether incorrect The moon eyed Celestials are only allowed to work claims that have been abandoned by white men Over these worked out claims John has paid a liberal price and on these terms the miners have all made the best wages Those who have come to "come in" Those far they have been especially employed in working over dirt that had been worked by white men The work on the big shaft of which mention has already been made, will be continued and the owners are satisfied that they have a big thing Several other extensive operations are going on and the promise is that with another year Kootenai will rival a larger gold yield than ever The development of these mines is a matter in which our people are largely interested Their location is such that it is almost impossible to introduce supplies from the British Columbia side, and as a consequence, Walla Walla is called upon to furnish the breadstuffs and bacon required for the Kootenai trade At the time Mr Galbreath left the mines Walla Walla flour was worth $40 per barrel and scarce at that Parties who packed flour out there late in the season had a good thing and the only regret on the part of the miners was that a greater number of packers did not come that way We learn that several pack trains that started for Kootenai were induced to seek another market owing to representations that the Kootenai country was overstocked These statements were made by interested parties who had supplies on the mines and desired to monopolize the trade Owing to these misrepresentations, flour will rule this winter at from $40 to $50 instead of $24 or $30, at which figure it would pay packers well to pack it in As it is, the miners will be compelled to pay high prices and go on short allowance —Walla Walla Statesman

THE YANKEE COLONY IN PALESTINE —The Atlantic telegraph announces the arrival at Jaffa of the small colony from the State of Maine whose intention it is to make a settlement in the Holy Land, with sanguine expectations of great success in laying anow the foundations of prosperity in that country. The American missionary H H Jessup, writing from Beirut, September 3d, thus alludes to the movement

We are all distressed at the news of the coming of a colony of Americans from Maine to settle in Jaffa. The Consul at Jerusalem has written to Mr Seward, to dissuade the deluded people from such an insane undertaking, but they will not be dissuaded Nothing less than the sacred soil will satisfy them They will find the Turkish Government suspicious and opposed to them at every step Once outside the Jaffa gardens the plain is frequented by the Bedouin, and they will find the Holy Land too hot for them in more senses than one It seems sad that sober reason could not have reached them I have noticed advertisements of the scheme in the papers from time to time, but regarded it as a hoax We now hear they are coming! May the Lord have mercy on them!

An accurate account of the visionaries who have made similar raids on the Holy Land during this century, either as individuals or in companies would be one of the most astounding books ever written. But this down-cast attempt to get further east bids fair to cap the climax

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S POLICY —The Democracy have fallen into a ridiculous habit of asserting that Andy Johnson's policy is nothing more nor less than the policy of Abraham Lincoln Mr Charles A Dana, who was Assistant Secretary of War under Mr Lincoln, recently made a speech in New York, in which he uses the following language, which may be found interesting as bearing upon the assertion mentioned above

It is said that Johnson a policy of reconstruction is precisely what Mr Lincoln s must have been had he lived. I can affirm that previous to the assassination of Mr Lincoln, the reconstruction of Virginia was considered by the Cabinet and a printed document was prepared setting forth the plan of reconstruction to be adopted in regard to that State That printed document never became official, but at met the hearty approval of Mr Lincoln That plan of reconstruction provided for a convention to amend the constitution of the State of Virginia, and states most positively that all loyal citizens, whether white or black should be allowed to vote And it further stipulated that rebels should be denied the right of suffrage That plan was Mr Lincoln s idea of reconstruction

BREECH LOADERS—NEW TACTICS —The New York Times says

Despite the great reputation gained by the Prussian needle gun, the experiments of the Boards appointed by the War Department to examine the various systems of breech loaders have shown that no foreign nation has thus far made equal progress with us in breech loading arms After a very rigid examination of the various European and American systems of breech loading, the Austrian Royal Commission, of which Archduke Wilhelm was President, have unanimously decided in favor of the rifle manufactured by a New York firm The importance however, of adopting a breech loader as the arm for the infantry as well as the cavalry arm has long been appreciated by our Government, and ere long a muzzle-loader will be as much despised as the flint lock of ancient days

A change is also to be made in the tactics of the army and accordingly a Board has been convened at West Point to recommend a system for adoption, and there seems to be very little doubt but that the system proposed by Major General Upton will receive the endorsement of the Board This system is based upon four files as its tactical unit, and not only does away with inversion, but otherwise greatly simplifies the drilling of troops

A SEVERE REPLY —An Eastern cotemporary, under the heading "Worse than a Dead Duck," tells the following

In 1863 there was a severe stump debate between Andrew Johnson then a candidate for governor and Gustavus Henry, generally known as Gus, the eagle orator. The debate was severe and excited much interest Andy closed his speech with this annihilating declamation

"We met this eagle, and I can say with an honest heart that he has none of my flesh on his talons—none of my blood on his beak"

This was good, and would have been a stumper, but the undismayed Gus immediately arose to his feet and replied

'Tis true the honest gentleman has met the eagle and bears no traces of having left flesh upon his talons or blood upon his beak And 'tis not strange, my friends, for those of you who know the habits of our national bird know full well that he never feeds upon carrion'

Such a stunt and such a discomfiture made Andy quake

SOUTH CAROLINA —EX Provisional Governor Perry, of South Carolina, has written a letter of mingled pluck, bombast and pathos, in which he avers that though the Southern States may be ruined, they cannot be dishonored and disgraced save by their own acts Hence he opposes the adoption of the constitutional amendment

The Governor, it seems to us says the New York Tribune, does this at unnecessary expense of sensibility. Was the South disgraced [illegible] giving a previous constitutional amendment repudiating the rebel debt, and the short lived ordinance of secession, or any enactment possibly term the "attention?"—supposing, of course, that all these things were done in good faith Was it so much easier to swallow the big and bitter dose prescribed by President Johnson, than to take the mild one offered by the Radical Congress? Or has the President so far poisoned the patient that he don't know his medicine?

ACCOMMODATING HIMSELF TO CIRCUMSTANCES —The Richmond correspondent of the Danville Register tells the following story about General Alleghany" Johnston, on the march to Bristol Station in the fall of 1863 The General was riding along the road and perceiving one of his men up a persimmon tree hallooed to him

I say there, what are you doing there? Why aint you with your regiment?"

I m gettin' summons, I am," replied the soldier

I ersimmons, thunder! They are not ripe yet They are not fit to eat

Lyes, but General persisted the Confederate, I'm trying, to draw my stomach up to suit the size of my rations If it stops like it is now I shall starve

The General had nothing further to say, but rode on

There are now building in England or under orders to be built 20 non armor plated vessels of war The estimated expenditure on the hulls of the vessels from April 1st last to March 1st next is $256 632 From the return moved for by Mr Laird relative to non plated ships and batteries it seems that there are 30 iron plated ships afloat and 4 building The floating batteries are the Erebus, Terror, Thunderbolt and Thunder

This is to certify that my daughter was almost blind for over seven years, and was doctored by other physicians without obtaining any relief when finally I took her to Dr G W Brown No consulting her case at once began to give her treatment and her sight has been entirely restored I do this to let those who are suffering with diseases of the eyes know where they can obtain a cure I have been blind for over four months, and almost blind for one year and a half I tried several eye doctors but received no benefit I had almost given my case up as hopeless when fortunately I heard of Dr G W Brown now of Salem I was induced to try him, he performed a surgical operation on my eyes, and gave me treatment I soon began to recover, and in a short time I was perfectly cured I do this in justice to one who rescued me from a fate worse than death and also for the benefit of those who are laboring under similar afflictions that they may know where they can get relief It is now about eight months since my eyes were cured and they still remain good I can see to read the finest print without difficulty, and my eyes can bear the strongest light without pain ALEXANDER MITCHELL
